

Team Development

We offer individual team development processes in line with the team challenge. The following steps are usually part of the workshops:

- Team purpose – Why should we act as a team?
- Team diagnostic – Where are our strengths? Where is our potential?
- Team collaboration – How do we work with each other? What is our individual and team responsibility? What is the frame for our collaboration?
- High team performance – using competencies, realizing synergies, working together with utmost alignment and passion to create team success.

Our team development workshops offer:

- Teambuilding

Employees work together for the first time. A part of the teambuilding process is the fundamental understanding of team targets, roles and processes.

- Team effectiveness

Team members already work with each other. Potentials, however, are not entirely used. A crucial part of a team effectiveness workshop is to clarify complementary competencies of the team members by a previously realized Harrison Assessments process.

- High team performance

Team members work on their target with passion and effectiveness. The performance level is increased by developing team passion, using potential and synergies and creating top engagement. Parts of the workshop are The Passion Test and the Harrison Assessments results.
